ENTRIES COME IN FAST FOR TANFORAN STAKES

By J. W. MARCHBANK

John E. Madden never had a superior as a salesman and much of his success in disposing of thoroughbreds was due to judicious exploitation. One of the main factors in increasing the value of his young horses was the practice of nominating them for rich stakes. I recently ran across an advertisement of the late master of Hamburg Place (in a monthly racing publication of ten years ago) in which Madden offered for sale:

"Well engaged two-year-olds by Sir Martin, Friar Rock, and other sires, personal inspection, no correspondence."

If a breeder is rearing stock for the sales ring, for private sale, or to race in his own colors, it is the best policy, by far, to make them eligible to features to be run in the next few seasons at important tracks. Not only Madden, but other breeders of the past and present, never failed to keep strict account of stakes, for yearlings, two-year-olds, or even for foals yet to be born.

Nominations for the California Breeders Lassie Stakes to be renewed at Tanforan in 1937 are coming in at a good rate and many more are expected in the closing days of the month. The nominations, according to the conditions of the event, must be in the mail by midnight of July 31 of this year, only a few days off.

Of great interest to breeders of the country, East as well as West, is the Tanforan Futurity, to be run for the first time in the fall of 1938. This is a produce stake, with the dams to be named the first part of 1936. I anticipate the number of entries for the new stakes for two-year-olds to grow year by year until the Tanforan Futurity will be a race known throughout the world.

That my King Heather, sire of the undefeated Maid of Perth, and himself with an unblemished record on the race course, is destined to be a leading broodmare progenitor, is already indicated by the performances of some of the produce of his daughters, as I have pointed out at other times, and the blood lines of matrons to be sold at Saratoga next month make my opinion even stronger than ever.

Limerick Lass, a successful mare in the breeding paddock, is by the Commando horse Celt, from a Disguise mare. As is well known, King Heather is by Disguise, from the Celt mare Antrim, the same blood as the "Lass," only the other way round. It is worth reading what the experts drawing up the catalogue for Fasig-Tipton say of Celt, maternal grandsire of the "King":

"Leading broodmare sire of 1930; sire of dams of the stakes winner Gallant Fox (11 wins and $328,165, also sire of Omaha,) Swivel, (Pimlico Futurity), Easter Stockings, Nocturnal, Ormesby, Dr. Freeland, Mint Olga, Mad Pursuit and others."

That's the kind of blood that makes me highly encouraged in my operations over at Heather Farm.

THRILLS COMING FOR MOVIE FANS AT LOCAL HOUSE

Film To Start Sunday Has Ingratitude As Basis Of Sensational Plot

No matter how a criminal may tamper with his finger prints, they can never be erased.

Numerous attempts to burn them off, sear them with acid or heat or even to slice them off, have simply proved boomerangs, for the design grows back again in its original form, only made many times clearer to the eye of the expert.

This is but one of the many dramatic phases of tracking down public enemies revealed in "Let 'Em Have It," Reliance's thrill-packed film saga of the Goverment's war on crime, which is coming to the Daly City Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 28, 29 and 30.

The story deals with the attempted kidnapping of a wealthy society girl by a gang of which her chauffeur is suspected by federal officers of being the ringleader. He is sent to prison on the charge of carrying a gun, the society girl later secures his parole against the advice of the detectives working on the case, and he justifies the government operatives' suspicion by becoming "Public Enemy No. 1."

The events of the relentless pursuit and the eventful meting out of justice to these arch criminals make one of the most thrilling and fascinating pictures which has ever been screened.

On the same program will be shown "Stolen Harmony," with Ben Bernie and George Raft.

POLICE CAPTURE HIT RUN SUSPECT

Elwood Overly of 359 Hyde street, San Francisco, was arrested Tuesday evening about 11:30 o'clock at the Silver Cafe on Mission street by Officers J. Kusher and George Hopman.

The police say Overly, driving a car owned by the proprietor of the Silver Cafe, R. Martini, 6189 Mission street, struck an automobile owned and operated by George Ford, of San Diego avenue, while Ford was waiting for the go signal at at Highland avenue and Mission street about 9:30 o'clock. A young woman riding with Ford was treated at the Allemany Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Overly hit Ford's car and drove on without stopping to render aid, according to the police.

The description of the car and license number were radioed to the local department and Overly was held in jail for the San Francisco police.

COUNCIL HONORS LATE MEMBERS

The City Council transacted regular business at a meeting Monday evening. All bids received for insurance on public liability of the city and its officials were rejected and new bids will be advertised for, as a new state law limits a municipality's liability and should materially reduce the cost of the insurance.

A communication from the Community Welfare Association indorsed the Council's plan to forbid fireworks of all kinds.

The Council adjourned out of respect to the memory of former members, Joseph A. Meeks and Thomas J. Mullen. Mullen in late years was a resident of San Francisco. He was a member of the first Daly City Board of Trustees, when the city was incorporated in 1911. A. J. Green is the only survivor of the original board of five.

LIVESTOCK PROJECT MAY CARRY ON

A pocket veto by Governor Frank Merriam of an Assembly bill prevents the proposed allocation of $600,000 of state relief funds for the San Francisco - San Mateo International Livestock Exposition in Visitacion Valley. Almost unanimous approval was accorded the bill in both the Senate and Assembly.

C. H. Sooy, president of Agricultural District 1-A, declares the project will go right on ,as more than $1,000,000 is still available from other sources than state relief funds.

Sooy pointed out that about $1,100,000 is pledged, and said that the loss of the $600,000 will merely postpone the construction of all units of the exposition.

Sooy appeared before the County Board of Supervisors Monday and made a plea for $50,000 provisionally pledged for the project, saying it could not be carried out if the County did not make it possible to start grading the Visitacion site by next Thursday.

BOARD DECIDES TO PUSH WORK ON NEW BRIDGE

Supervisors To Attend Session of San Francisco Body In Garbage "War"

Immediate econstruction of the Lobitos creek bridge under emergency proceedings was ordered at the meeting Monday of the County Board of Supervisors. On motion by Supervisor Al Witt, Daly City, it was voted unanimously to direct the county engineering office to proceed with the construction of a box culvert and fill to replace the worn out wood span.

The bridge situation was declared an "emergency" and the board put itself on record as unwilling to lose time in applying for WPA funds or calling for bids for private contract for the work.

The supervisors agreed to attend as a body the meeting of the San Francisco board on August 5, to protest against further garbage disposal operations by the bay city in northern San Mateo County. At that time the San Francisco supervisors will consider bids for "fill-and-cover" disposal in this county.

"We should be there to go on record forcibly against the proposed contract," said Supervisor Al Witt,

PEOPLE TO VOTE ON IMPROVEMENTS END OF AUGUST

At an important session of the City Council on Wednesday evening a resolution was passed calling a special municipal election on Saturday, August 24, for submission to the electorate of a proposal to authorize the Council to make expenditures out of the general fund for the purpose of carrying out a comprehensive program of public improvements.

Assessments this year will be 50 per cent of the actual valuation of property instead of an average of 25 per cent as heretofore and if the proposition of improvements should carry at the election it is the intention for the Council to levy a dollar rate for general purposes; in case of defeat, the rate will be approximately one-half of that amount. The members of the Council say the dollar general tax levy this year would provide sufficient funds to make possible the carrying out of the forward-looking program. The direct tax was decided to be much preferable to a bond issue, which entails paying of interest over a period of years.

A sum not to exceed $35,000 will be expended in the event of a favorable vote at the election. The tax rate suggested is the rate adopted by the State Board of Equalization in establishing the valuation of various public utilities which are to be taxed by the city this year.

Contemplated improvements are:

Construction of library building; acquiring of Vista Grande Grammar School building and its renovation; construction of an auditorium; development of Daly City Park; renovation of City Hall and fire houses; erection of jail and extension of water department.

BOOM IN MINING STIRS AMBITION OF BOLD SPIRITS AS IN OLD DAYS

Airplane and Modern Methods Open Up Opportunities for Fortunes

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

All through the West and up North mining is going strong. Both gold and silver operations are growing day by day, with even conservtives getting a bit "het-up" about prospects. Nearly every newsparer in all sections has stories about the present revival and the magazines are running such yarns as "There's No Place Like Nome," copiously illustrated.

The reports from up Bering Sea way declare that with beach mining, rockers, and sluicing going on, construction of buildings, and the erection of a tent city along the beach, Nome recalls somewhat the days of the gold rush thirty-five years ago.

As has been said by many mining men, Alaska is getting all kinds of benefits from the activity in the ranks of the searchers for the precious metal.

A number of swampy section which the old-timers did not touch will be tested and it is likely paystreaks will be found. Many areas which could not be touched on account of inaccessibility are now available by the aid of airplane.

Mining engineers, operators and investors are going into Alaska in larger numbers this year than ever before, that is, since the hectic period of the rushes into the Klondike and Nome camps. Reliable reports are to the effect that while prices for gold and silver have been advancing, scores of enterprising individuals have been going over from other industries, notably that of lumber, into that of mining.

* * *

Corey Ford and Alastair MacBain, well known writers, saw Alaska recently, mostly by plane, and tell about it in the August Vanity Fair. One interesting part:

"We had expected a land of perpetual ice and snow; we found in its place a vast and verdant land of flowers and forests, the greatest scenic show on earth, incredibly beautiful, strange, exciting, true. Alaska can still be rough enough and tough enough, when it wants to be. It is no country to fool with. Its winters can still be plenty punishing, its wild game savage, its mountains perilous and untamed. But the summer visitor to Alaska, or the Matanuska settler homesteading on government land in the fertile, mid-section, or the year-round resident in any of its modern, efficient, stream-lined cities, sees a different Alaska from that which the wild-eyed reports of the fiction writers would have us swallow."

* * *

With the president in complete unison with the movement for the construction of the Alaska Highway and preliminaries under way it is well to re-state the summary of the benefits named by the presidential commission that looked into the matter. In strongly recommending the construction the report said:

The highway will make Alaska more accessible; it will be a great contribution to American citizens now living in Alaska under adverse transportation conditions; it will open a vast new territory to settlement; it will be an aid to air travel furnishing a guiding landmark along the most practicable flying route to Alaska; and it would promote friendly relations between citizens of the United States and of Canada.

SOLON CALLS ON CITIZENS TO PUT "PEP" IN COUNTY

Congressman John J. McGrath has been doing a bit of talking right to the point. He is of the opinion San Mateo County is going at too slow a pace; in fact that it is going backward.

In regard to the present situation, McGrath said, "If you don't intend to build up the county within itself and make it an important political entity, then join San Francisco. Either do something internally, or quit. Don't be a nobody."

BIG PLANT COMING

The E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company has announced location in South San Francisco of its western plant for manufacture of paint, varnish and lacquer products; it is expected to leave a payroll of $125,000 yearly.

FESTIVAL HEADS TO THRESH OUT DEFINITE PLANS

Large Attendance Expected At Meeting Tonight In Behalf of Pageant

Citizens from all sections of the county have promised to be present this evening at a meeting of the general committee of the San Mateo County Festival. The conference will be held in the San Mateo City Hall. Outlining of a complete program for the celebration is scheduled for the session.

It has been decided to make the pageant an annual event in the fall and all the arrangements for this year's fiesta will be a foundation for the years to come as well. The organization will be incorporated on non-profit lines and any profits will be carried over to the next year.

So that a better name could be used for the festival and for incorporation purposes, a prize of a season pass will be offered to the person or persons suggesting a more appropriate name. All sugestions should be mailed to Mayor Frank P. Simmen of San Mateo. There is no limit to the number of suggestions a person can make.

FIRE LADDIES DO GOOD WORK

LET'S GO PLACES AND DO THINGS

The Best Time You Ever Had Is Assured at the Benefit Dance

On Saturday evening, September 7, at the Tanforan Club House, the Daly City Municipal Employes are giving a benefit dance for Officer Edmond L. Heim of the Daly City Police Department, now convalescing at his home.

Officer Heim was injured on the Fourth of July by the premature explosion of a cannon firecracker, which he was lighting. Through an operation, he was deprived of three fingers of his left hand. He is now slowly recovering from the accident.

Every citizen of Daly City should be interested in the success of this dance. Let's all give it a boost!

We have all experienced dark moments in our lives, and during that time realized the blessing of kind and loyal neighbors, good Samaritans along the pathway of life. It has been said, "I never knew how many friends I had until I was in trouble." Ed knows now.

The Tanforan Club House is large and commodious. Let's all be there and crowd the place to overflowing.

Just for a moment, let us put ourselves, if possible, in the place of our injured friend, and realize, in a measure at least, how it would gladden our hearts to see our home town folks all turn out in our behalf.

We'll be there, Ed, with one thought in common—to give you a lift.

The place, Tanforan Club House.

The date, Saturday evening, September 7, 1935.

Best of union music.

RACE WIRE BETS LEGAL IN STATE

The bill applies only to money wagered at racetracks and does not legalize pool room betting.

BOARD DECIDES TO PUSH WORK ON NEW BRIDGE

Supervisors To Attend Session of San Francisco Body In Garbage "War"

Daly City. "We are bitterly opposed to continuance of garbage dumping."

The board served notice that economy with the taxpayers' money this year must also be practiced by special county districts, and held up five budget requests untii it received an opinion from the district attorney as to whether it is mandatory to comply with requests of the district boards, or whether they can be called in for a hearing on the items. Budgets held up were Millbrae fire district, $1964; county harbor district, $1500; Half Moon Bay sanitary district, 5 per cent increase over last year's allowance; Three Cities mosquito abatement district, $9025, and the recreation commission, continuance of the $10,000 beach acquisition fund and $5000 for recreational development.

"The county is going to economize, so should the districts," said Witt.

The board moved against county hog ranchers who are operating without permits, after a complaint from Health Director C. C. Gans. On Witt's motion, it requested the county health commission to notify all ranchers operating without permits to make application; for Gans to inspect ranches of all applicants, and for the commission to make final recommendations.

The board finds it will be $329,000 over the budget as fixed under the Riley Stewart plan if it contributes $50,000 to the livestock project and $10,000 a year for five years to Sunnyvale air base, so has determined to appear before the State Board of Equalization next week and ask for permission for an increase in the budget.

WALTONS WATCH A LUCKY CATCH

Saturday afternoon a party of well known fishermen, consisting of "Split Tail Al" Harrison, "Two Rod Pete" Valente, of Colma and "He Gets 'Em Charlie" Rodenberger motored to Montesum Slough, near Fairfield and visited with Comrade John F. Migge of Lomita Park who has a very nice shack up there, the flooring is made of soft pine, so says comrade at least for he slept on the floor.

Early Sunday morning right after a fine breakfast prepared by Chef Eddie Migge, the fishing comrades sallied forth in a high powered motor boat for the fishing banks. After fishing all morning, catching cat fish only, with an occasional small bass, the anchor was pulled and set sail for the shack, where a young jackrabbit lunch was waiting for us.

After lunch the brave fishermen again set out, determined to catch bass, but Lady Luck passed them up and the brand new fish stringer just bought by Comrade Harrison was never used. Nevertheless the party had the pleasure of witnessing a fellow fisherman in the adjoining boat land a seventeen pound bass, the only catch of the day.

The members of the party may be good fishermen but when it comes to fishing—well, another six months course in the Academy of Piscatorial Art, may qualify them as near fishermen. A fresh run of bass are now entering the slough and in another month the Montesuma will be good for very large fish, punk fishermen take notice. However, even if no bass were caught, the party had a very good time and the hospitality as shown by John Migge and his crew was such as becomes a comrade fisherman.

ANNUAL OUTING OF MERCHANTS TALK OF TOWN

Interest In Trek To Oak Cove Increases Over Wide Area

Each day we are reminded of the forthcoming annual picnic and outing of the Daly City Merchants Association. We see it advertised in the shop windows, in the newspapers, and the query is already on the lips of thousands: "I suppose you are going to the Merchants Picnic on August 11?" and the answer invariably is, "Yes, we are reserving that day for one good time. Yes, we are all going, not only from Daly City, but from all over the county, and from San Francisco." There will probably be the largest crowd which has ever attended a picnic in this county.

The committee are working in anticipation of just such a crowd. Working to see to it that they all enjoy themselves to the utmost. There will be a parade in Daly City led by the Daly City Band, officers and members of the association, and city and county officials. The safety of the people joining in the parade in Daly City and thence to the picnic grounds will be carefully guarded by the police of Daly City and our efficient highway patrol, who will lead the caravan to the grounds.

Almost every kind of entertainment will be furnished, races, games, contests, music, dancing, base ball, horse-shoe pitching. An orchestra will be in attendance for dancing, and this will be in addition to two concerts by our famous Daly City Band.

The general plan is to meet at the City Hall at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, August 11 and join the crowd. Everyone should bring a well filled basket, but there will be plenty to eat and drink at the grounds, and no one will go hungry or thirsty.

The committees are: Publicity, W. E. Pitschke; refreshments, Vireno, Pavlos and Bartoli; games and prizes, Callsen, Bodien, and Chief of Police Doyle; dancing, Mather and Callsen; contact of merchants, for the county line, Mather and Downall; at the hill, Weld, Ruggeri, Williamson and Pavlos; printing, Williamson, Vireno and Pavlos.

Don't forget the date, August 11, nor the place, Oak Cove Park, just two miles west of San Mateo. Turn off at Mills Memorial Hospital, San Mateo.

Band Master George Brenner of the Daly City Band has prepared the following program for the picnic:

March Gloria, Losey; Victor Herberts Favorities, Victor Herbert; The Blue and Gray Patrol, Dalbey; Hungarian Comedy, Keller-Bela; Washington Post March, Sousa; Panorama Overture, C. L. Barnhouse; Royal Decree March, W. P. English; intermission; Chicago Worlds Fair March, Lieut. Carl Mader; Gems of Ireland (Irish Melodies), George D. Barnard; Amapola (Spanish), J. Lacalle; Chicago Police Band (new), Lieut. Carl Mader; Jolly Fellows Waltz, Vollstedt; Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna, F. Von Suppe; Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa; finale, The Star Spangled Banner.

All members of the band are requested to attend band rehearsal Tuesday night, July 30.

BLUE AND GOLD BAND TO OPEN STATE FAIR

The 125-piece marching band of the University of California will open the California State Fair on August 31, and also participate in the American Legion patriotic pageant on Sunday ,September 1.

The university band took part in the State Fair program for the first time two years ago and proved one of the most popular opening day features.

The San Francisco Municipal Band, directed by Philip Sapiro, will come to Sacramento for the Labor Day program and remain through closing Admission Day ceremonies on September 9.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness. He distrusts Crack, although finding his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and he makes a little progress with Barry.

"Well, we don't have to die afterwards—unless we want to," Kerrigan went on. "And it's no fair dying either till each of the others asks one question. We draw lots to see who starts."

He broke matches to different lengths, offered them in his fist, the ends protruding evenly. He said, "Or don't you want to do this?" glancing at Barry.

"Mm," said Barry, and held out her hand. "Who goes first—long or short?"

"Long."

There was a thin air of excitement about it, as in a game of Truth or Consequences. Barry studiously kept her eyes on Kerrigan's. Hal rummaged in his mind for the right question to ask her when his turn came. And the little tenseness stayed about them after Barry had drawn the middle-length match, Hal the short, with Kerrigan to begin.

"Frankly, I don't know why I started this," said Kerrigan, his eyes cheerful and warm, "so I'll make it dull as possible. I was born in Chicago, fifty-one years ago, with a caul. My mother wanted me to go into the church, my stepfather wanted me in a bank, so I decided to be a cowboy. I entered the University of Chicago at the age of seventeen and came out of it again at seventeen and a quarter for a job on the range in Wyoming. I wrote up a barroom shooting and had the misfortune to get it printed in a Cheyenne paper. Since then I've worked on nineteen newspapers, being fired from one and resigning from eighteen in the nick of time. I am on my way to the twentieth, and last, run by an old friend in Southern California. I like horses, shad roe, and derby hats; and I never take old brandy except when I can get it. So there."

"Ah, is that all?" said Barry, her brows raised, her blue eyes tenderly disappointed.

"Enough for today," said Kerrigan. "Now it's—"

"But I get a question," said Barry.

"So you do."

"Any question?"

Kerrigan said, "The more personal, the more flattering," in quiet courtliness.

She looked at him, looked down at the knife she fingered in her firm, dexterous hand, then up again gently. "Have you been married?" she said.

"Never," said Kerrigan. "I used to keep coming down with love, but there was always something happened."

She watched him a second longer, the gentleness draining reluctantly from her eyes. Then for the first time since they'd sat down she turned to Hal, incuriously, and said, "You get one."

"The one time you were fired—" Hal began, watching to be sure it was all right. Kerrigan's look started a pleased dancing "Why were you?" Hal said.

"Well, it's a long story—a long story," said Kerrigan.

"Then all the better," said Barry, low and comfortable. "Come on—you started this."

"Well, my friends, it seems I have a half-brother," said Kerrigan, still tasting the cheerful reminiscense: "older—respectable, systematic as a ball-team, steady, worthy, ambitious. He sings 'The Road to Mandalay' in his morning bath.

"I used to displease him very much in youth," Kerrigan went on. "So we didn't get along. He gave up the job of reforming me—and went into a bank and did well. Ten years passed. I had a job on a paper in Montana. My half-brother's bank sent him out to look at some copper mines that were in trouble and I was s'posed to get an interview. I knew the situation at the mines, and I was pretty sure the situation in my brother's head hadn't changed much in ten years. So instead of listening to what he thought he ought to think about it and getting ten years' accumulated Y. M. C. A. on the side, I smacked out a couple of columns of what I thought he ought to think and went off to sit up with a sick friend.

"My brother made his tail pretty big when he saw the interview, but it was bigger when he found out who wrote it. And before I could get to the office, I was fired. It was a dirty trick on him. But it made a new man of me. That was before I got used to having things make new men of me all the time."

Barry watched him for a moment of confidential pleasure, smiling, and then said, "I like that." And Hal suspected that if the tough cheeks hadn't been so thickly peopled with the little red veins, Kerrigan might have blushed.

"Now it's your turn," he said to her.

Her look at Kerrigan was unworried, but faintly reticent. And Hal was as intent for the parting of her full lips as if she were going to tell his fortune. Then in quiet leisure she said:

"I'm twenty-three. I was born in Massachusetts, in Deerfield. Both my parents are dead. I finished high school and was secretary to a country lawyer for two years. I'd always wanted to go on the stage, so when I—when things changed, when my father died, I got a job in stock. I had three years of that round the East, without getting to Broadway; and now I'm going to try to get into pictures." She looked down thoughtfully, perhaps relievedly, at the knife in her hand, to show she had finished. "Thanks for listenin'," she added, with a brighter glance at Kerrigan. "You get questions, too."

"What do you like best—to do?" said Kerrigan at once.

"Read," she said.

"You've read a lot?" he said.

She smiled easily. "I learned to read when I was six, and I've read ever since. I've learned darn-near everything I know from reading—what I like, what I don't like, what I—what I want. I copied characters in books until one day I found I didn't have any idea who I really was at all. And that frightened me a little."

Lunch came then, and she seemed to stop sooner that she had at first intended. Hal hoped the obituaries would be ended too—including his question to Barry. He couldn't ask her any of the things he found he really wanted to know; and such passable questions as he thought of sounded silly. But when the dishes were settled and the iced-tea and coffee situation straightened out, Kerrigan looked at him and said, "Now your question."

"If you—when you make good in the movies, and have lots of money," he said, "what will you do?"

Her eyes were faintly surprised by interest and they stayed on his, appraising the picture he'd provoked for her. "I hadn't thought," she said. "If—if I should arrive. . . ." That picture was dubious, but the light lingered gently in her eyes, neither reckless with hope nor intimidated by disappointment. "If I should arrive and they plugged me and finished me, I'd go to England—France, to see it, to see if it's the place I've thought it might be. I'd live there for a while, and then . . . I don't know."

He Looked Expectantly at Barry.

Her lighted eyes came back slowly and without bitterness to the fragile, cheap tearoom, strayed expectantly to the table opposite, where Mrs. Pulsipher's account of Niagara Falls had struck a snag in her husband's doubt that it was there they'd been charged sixty cents for tough steak with yesterday's onions. Whatever Barry hoped to see, she didn't see. Hal wondered if the loneliness in her look was accidental: he felt that if she'd been aware of it, she wouldn't have let it appear. "Now it's your turn," she said to him.

"I'll tell you," said Hal. "I'm twenty-six. I was born in New York, but if I had it to do over again, I wouldn't be born there: I'd only go there when I felt like it. I went to school and college in New England, and then was sent abroad—to decide what I'd do. I nearly decided on a career of just being abroad, but one dark, rainy morning I was carrying a sort of headache past a steamship office, when I suddenly went in and bought a steerage ticket home. I was a runner in Wall Street for a while. Then I got a chance at a job about three thousand miles away from the Stock Exchange, and took it. That's where I'm going now—San Francisco."

Hal finished, looking at Kerrigan; then he took a mouthful of cold chicken, suddenly eager to hear Barry's question.

"What business is it going to be?" Kerrigan asked; and Hal liked the implication that the more important things between them would come in their own good time.

"Air business," said Hal. "Expect to be started cleaning boundary lights at the field."

"Envy you," said Kerrigan. "If I had a son, I'd put him in that. Twice a year I give myself a good kicking for not having gone into railroads, at your age." He looked expectantly at Barry.

Her eyes were incurious—as if she hadn't till then thought of anything she could want to ask. And then, without more than the most superficial apology in her tone, she said, "Please don't answer if you'd rather not. The reason I'm asking—the reason stops and I forget I had it, whether you tell me or not. Are you Frederick Ireland's son?"

He tried to force from her clear, polite look a hint of why she wanted to know; but all he could see was confirmation of what she had said: she didn't ask out of idle curiosity and yet the answer wasn't momentous to her.

"Yes, I am," he said.

She believed him, but it gave her nothing to think about. And Hal swore he would find out why she had asked that of him if he had to back her into a corner on the last day and shake her firm shoulders till she told him. No, not shake them: hold them, perhaps, but not shake them. And it should be before the last day, too. I wonder, he said to himself, if you'd tell me why you wanted to know that, without my even asking you. If you weren't so good to look at, Miss Trafford, you probably wouldn't be making so much trouble for yourself.

"I've met your father," said Kerrigan, without especial significance.

"Have you?" said Hal. "Where?"

"In Paris," said Kerrigan. "When Wilson came over the first time. Were you with him?"

"No," said Hal; "I wasn't."

But Hal was wondering why, when it had never come hard to take challenges, he should shy at the prospect of later pretending to this girl that he was in love with her. She knew her way round; he had never seen her before and would probably never— Hal interrupted himself with a fresh wonder: why couldn't he easily conceive of not seeing her again? A little more than twenty-four hours it was, since they'd started: he didn't even know what she looked like with her hat off. Oh, the h—l with it: just remember how easily she can make you mad and don't go Travelers' Aid till you have to.

Straight roads long-laid across the flatness of Ohio, with the sultry, flat afternoon in a hazy layer between the land and the stubbornly moving sun. Then Kerrigan saw "Detroit" on a signboard at less than a hundred miles. Pulsipher hummed a vague, contented piece of tune over to himself; Barry and Mrs. Pulsipher were discussing Florida oranges, mail-order shopping, red hair, and railway travel, with Sister Anastasia's gentle surprise and inquiry between them; and Kerrigan pored over his pocket atlas, puffing away the smoke from his short cigarette, to identify each strand in the web of railroads that converged upon Toledo.

Perhaps two hours more; and even if the ease of relief was rolling in now with every mile, the thing to do was push straight on without stopping, whether stark hunger overtook the Pulsiphers or not.

"Say," came Crack's drowsy, confidential whisper near Hal's ear. Hal turned his head a little, his attention in alert suspense. "We could eat in Detroit," Crack said in softly impish conspiracy. "Run right through, we could—not give this bird another chance to try a quick one." Hal made himself ignore the coincidence: he nodded briefly and said, "Good idea."

If Crack, basking in the secret sunshine of his own little schemes, could be made uneasy, there must be something more to Miller's influence than Hal liked to allow.

In the next rising of talk behind them Hal leant a little toward Kerrigan and murmured: "Is there anything about that fella that—" He thought he saw understanding in Kerrigan's eyes and turned back to the road without finishing.

But Kerrigan said, "Which fella?" curiously. Hal glanced at him again quickly: the brown eyes still seemed to understand what he meant. And Hal dismissed the subject gingerly, muttering, "Later, later."

Across the Maumee and through the fringes of Toledo. It grew dark slowly; then the sprawl of a city began to infringe upon the openness, gradually and in disorder.

"Dearborn," Crack suddenly whispered, and Hal wondered why it sounded exciting, even faintly sinister.

Crack semed to know Detroit, and to invest the names he spoke with undertones of leashed significance: Telegraph road; Michigan road that went straight into the dark behind them for two hundred and eighty miles to become Michigan boulevard in Chicago; River Rouge—a dark-gleaming creek that curled under the highway and gave its name to the plant where had worked more people than it took to build the Pyramids or sail the Armada.

"You sorta feel things goin' on here," said Crack quietly behind Hal's head. "Don't you?"

"Yes, you do," said Hal.

"I like Detroit," Crack said in shy complacence. "I used to work here."

Hal had a quick curiosity to know what it was Crack had worked at; but something suggested that if he asked, the lazy, immature voice wouldn't tell him the truth.

It was nearly ten o'clock—the night breathless, the pavement still remembering the sun's implacability—when they rolled into Cadillac square.

Islanders Firm in Unbelief

Forced to Admit Existence of Four "Outsiders," but Placed No Faith in Explorers' Wild Stories of World's Teeming Millions.

Four young explorers from Cambridge university—a surveyor, an ornithologist, a zoologist and a botanist—recently visited Grimsey island, on the Arctic circle, 35 miles from the north coast of Iceland; before these four Englishmen arrived the 115 inhabitants of the island, who live on the fisheries and the birds which breed on the island, might—by a little stretch of the imagination—have believed themselves the only inhabitants of the earth, says the New York Sun.

Assuming such a belief, it is easy to imagine the astonishment with which the Grimsey islanders would listen to tales of the outside world—to stories of the hundreds of millions of persons who dwell on the globe.

This is by way of introduction to the story of the meeting of the council of the elders of Grimsey, held on the day after the departure of the explorers for England; by a fortunate chance the minutes of the meeting were blown out of the council chamber window and borne down to the temperate zone by a freak of an Arctic gale; here they have been translated and a portion set down for the information of all concerned.

The meeting apparently opened in stricken silence. Then Eg-Wak, eldest of the elders, rose sadly and said: "Yes, you may well say this is a severe blow to us all. You all know that we have lived here for generation after generation secure in the faith that we were the only persons on this earth. Tradition said so; legends handed down from father to son said so; and our eyes told us so, for wherever we looked we saw nobody but Grimsey islanders.

"Then—and may the day sink in the sea forever—these four appeared and though they could not speak our tongue, they were of a likeness to us and they told us they were men, like us. They managed to make us understand this, and even that there were as many more back beyond as there are fish in the sea.

"This is an unsettling doctrine. I, for one, decided last night that this was a collective apparition, unusual only in that it appeared to 115 persons at once. You may say that the four strangers were convincing; so is a dream convincing. I think that we can return to our old faith that we are the only inhabitants of the world and not trouble ourselves about a bad dream."

Next to speak was Blub-veek, a man of mature and thoughtful middle age. He said: "I wish that I could think it was a dream, but not once in my life have I been able to pinch the figures in a dream, or to watch them eat fish, or to hear them laugh. No, I am convinced that these were men, like us, and not the figures of a dream. But even so, I do not know what we should do. I am like a boat adrift."

Next to rise was Slek-dik, from the minutes evidently renowned for his ability as a compromiser. He said: "I, too, am sad that ancient traditions, going back to the birth of these northern lights, are shaken by the steps of four men. But I, too, am aware that these men were flesh and blood, like us.

"True, we can no longer believe ourselves the sole inhabitants of the earth, but the difference is slight. What we have discovered is that there are, in fact, four other persons in the world, but that they are such dreadful liars that it is impossible to believe a word they say. Therefore we may admit their existence unofficially, but officially we shall pay no attention to them and it will be absolutely unnecessary to worry about the millions and hundreds of millions. They are simply made up."

Scientist Claims That Noises Can Be Deadly

Do women make more noise than motor cars?

According to an American professor of physics, yes. Giving evidence in an action to restrain a factory from making an excessive amount of noise, he described experiments with a sound meter which he had carried out in the district. These showed that women talking in their homes made 40 times more noise than the factory, and 50 per cent more noise than passing cars.

Apparently women talk more loudly in America, for experiments in this country show "loud conversation" as only double the noise of a suburban street, and two-thirds that of a pneumatic drill at 20 feet distance.

But the worst noise of all, according to one distinguished scientist, is one we can't hear. A few months ago he showed the congress of radio biology how ultra-sound waves could burn the fingers of a man holding a glass tube, although the tube itself was not heated. He claimed that it was possible to be killed by these vibrations, which were really sounds, although they could not be perceived by the naked ear.

OPTIMISM RULES AS TO PROSPECTS IN PLACER MINES

With Resumption of Milling at Big Plants Silver Will Go Upward

A review of the mining industry of British Columbia for the first six months of 1935 by George S. Pearson, Minister of Mines of British Columbia, estimates gross value at $21,672,674, indicating possible total of $46,500,000 for the full year.

This indicates an increase of $974,847, or 4.7 per cent over the value of the industry for the corresponding period of 1934.

In comparing the figures of production and value, it is interesting to note that gold, silver, copper and zinc show volume increases over the first six months of 1934, but that only gold and copper show a greater volume over the last six months of 1934.

Considering value of production, gold, silver and structural materials show increases over the first six months of 1934 while, compared with the last six months of 1934, gold and copper only show increased value production.

It was estimated at the first of the year that the value of the industry for 1935 would be about $44,500,000. The estimated value for the first six months would not seem to bear this out, but various factors must be considered.

It is pointed out that since the middle of 1933 the value of the mining industry steadily increased at a rate of about $1,000,000 for each six months' period.

The following table clearly indicates this progress for the last six months of 1933 and for the two six-month periods of 1934:

First six months	$12,887,984
Last six months, 1933	19,719,688
First six months, 1934	20,697,827
Last six months, 1934	21,607,470
First six months, 1935	21,672,674

The production of placer gold is always greater in the last six months' period of each year and an increase of at least $300,000 can be looked for in the last six months of 1935.

In the case of lode-gold, the volume is considerably greater and the average price slightly higher. Value of lode-gold production would have been about $500,000 greater, but for curtailment at Premier mine, due to fire of last autumn, and to shutdown at the Pioneer and Bralorne mines due to labor troubles.

It is anticipated that production from mills recently put into operation or to be put into operation in the course of the next month will add about $500,000 to lode-gold in last six months of 1935. This figure is likely to be increased by small shipping mines by the end of the year.

Silver shows a volume increase over the first six months of 1934, but a decrease compared to the last six months of 1934. This is due to a drop in production of lead-zinc ores.

A considerable part of this loss can be directly attributed to the cessation of milling operations at the Monarch mine, near Field.

It is believed, however, that milling will shortly be resumed, in which case volume production of silver for 1935 will be greater than in 1934.

New production of several small silver properties will also help to increase the volume production.

The increased price of silver has more than offset the small decrease in volume and a substantial increase in volume may be looked for by the end of the year.

Should the present price hold, the value increase, due to the difference between the average and present price, will amount to over $200,000: Copper production is greater in volume than for either six-months period in 1934. The average price accounts for the difference in value production.

Volume of lead produced is only slightly below that for the first six months of 1934, but considerably down from the last six months of 1934. Should the Monarch mine get back into production, yearly volume will be only slightly lower than for 1934.

The price of lead has recently stiffened, so it is anticipated value for 1935 will equal that for 1934.

If the present price holds, then the average price for the next six months will be a half cent more than in the first six months, which would mean a value increase of about $800,000.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of truth." These words from Psalms comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, July 28, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Truth." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Blessed is that man that maketh the Lord his trust, and respecteth not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies. . . . I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart. . . . Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O Lord: let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me" (Ps. 40: 4, 8, 11).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "To seek Truth through belief in a human doctrine is not to understand the infinite. We must not seek the immutable and immortal through the finite, mutable, and mortal, and so depend upon belief instead of demonstration, for this is fatal to a knowledge of Science. The understanding of Truth gives full faith in Truth, and spiritual understanding is better than all burnt offerings" (p. 286).

TWO MILLIONS EXPECTED TO BE EXPO COUNT

Million and a Quarter Have Seen Show In First Six Weeks

Like a shiny new battleship after its shakedown cruise, the California Pacific International Exposition, scarcely six weeks following its opening, is steaming along under forced draft with a "passenger list" record of a million and a quarter visitors and the two millionth guest expected soon.

Many of these visitors, not realizing the scope of the fair, are reported to have arranged single day stays in San Diego, which, perforce, they extended or else departed with a mere snap shot of the exposition, planning to return soon.

Exposition officials have just completed a survey of the routes followed and preferences of the first million and a quarter visitors. From this data is was found that most visitors decide on a minimum of three days as necessary really to see the many attractions of the fair.

Actual pedometer tests showed that a distance of 14.1 miles has to be covered merely to promenade the avenues and in and out of the many exhibit palaces, with their thousands of exhibits; up and down the midway and through Gold Gulch.

During the first day, visitors frequently visit the Ford building, Hollywood Motion Picture Hall of Fame, the Standard Oil Tower to the Sun, the Salon of Photography, Old Globe Theater, "Alpha, the Robot" and intersperse with this program meals in the Palisades Restaurant and the Casa Del Rey Moro Gardens. The first evening is spent viewing the gorgeous, breath taking lighting effects on the grounds.

The next day includes an inspection of Modeltown, with its sixty sixty miniature homes; watching radio stars broadcast, the Palace of Better Housing, progressive luncheon in the Palace of Foods and Beverages, a tour of the $50,000 model home which some exposition visitor eventually will own, ceramics making in the Hollywood potteries, inspection of the model U. S. army camp and the botanical gardens, the Wells-Fargo historical display, Mexican government display; refreshments in the Japanese tea garden, dinner in the Cafe of the World and symphonic music under the stars in the Ford Music Bowl.

Third day: Zoo with its 2500 rare animals, midway, luncheon in El Solana, Palace of Fine Arts, Palace of Natural History, Palace of Education, California State building, Palace of Electricity and Varied Industries, Water Palace, Federal building, House of Charm, CCC camp and, for dinner and all evening, Gold Gulch, the 21-acre replica of '49er days.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Qunestion: What capital city has the highest elevation of any other in the world and what else is distinctive about this city.

Answer: Quito, capital of Ecuador, South America, is one mile and three-quarters above the level of the sea, that is 9350 feet. Although only fifteen miles south of the equator, its climate is springlike the year around on account of its high altitude. It is a very ancient city, having been the capital for centuries of an old Indian nation of which practically nothing is known. In 1478 this city was captured by the Incas. In 1534, it was again captured by the Spaniards. Its population is now about 100,000. In ancient times, however, it is believed it was much larger. Although this city has but one railroad (leading to the coast), it has many modern conveniences, a university, a museum, a public library, several hospitals, and new public bathing pools. A traveler is able to locate school buildings because the children study out loud, their voices making such a din that they can be heard a long distance.

Question: Of whom does the population of Ecuador consist?

Answer: Spaniards and Indians and descendants of the two races, which in ancient times intermarried. There are some uncivilized Indians, some of whom have a horrible practice of curing the heads of the enemies they kill. They cut off the head and, having removed the bones, fill the skin with hot pebbles to dry it. As it shrinks they keep pressing it inward on all sides so carefully that it does not lose its shape, but dries to the size of a man's fist, keeping the same features it had during life. They are gruesome objects and when an Indian pulls one from under his blanket and offers it for sale people usually turn away in disgust.

Question: Where did Charles Darwin make his study of animal and vegetable life which led to his theory of the origin of the species?

Answer: The Galapagos Islands, off the coast of Ecuador and belonging to that country.

TREADS HELP BRAKES

Distance required for stopping is considerably less with good treads on tires as compared with tires on which the treads are worn smooth.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

FIRE PPREVENTION

By Chief A. P. Chesney

The subject of fire prevention is one that has many sides which can be treated from several angles. The first lesson called to the attention of the home owners is that 80 per cent of the fires in the United States start through carelessness in homes where care should be taken to safeguard our families and personal valuable keepsakes that money cannot replace.

Realizing the importance of fire prevention the majority of paid fire departments have a special detail of men for the purpose of educating the people for the elimination of the many unnecessary fires caused by carelessness and ignorance.

In the case of volunteer or partly paid departments the fire departments can only reach their residents through the local press or talking to their neighbors and try to drive home the idea that the best way to fight a fire is before it starts.

The local merchant can increase his business and keep purchases at home by advertising in The Record.

GREAT BALL GAVE TANFORANS TITLE

Analysis of Home Team Play Shows Boys Deserve Highest Praise

(By Al Gould)

We knew the boys could do it, and we are mighty happy to have our home town nine come through with such an important victory — the championship of the Peninsula League.

Time after time I have heard men who have been in the game or those that have been behind ball clubs critize "Jeff" Martin's methods in handling the Tanforans. He has played hunches in his use of players quite often, and some charge that he has worked some of the players too often.

I think the fact that the home team has won, and in doing so has come through with all the boys in good condition, testifies to his judgment as to assignments. "Jeff" is a hustler himself, and there were several boys on the team who might have slowed down, but "Jeff" is the kind of a fellow who keeps them up. He won't let a player flop.

I hear it said that the pitching aces came through for him, but it seems to me he had to have a little more than that.

Pretty important are our pitching force, Matty Sullivan and Lola Petrocchi. When they do something big there is a great deal of talk about their achievement, but they might not have been so successful, had it not been for their catcher. If the pitching staff is the mainspring of a baseball nine, then the catching force surely must be the balance of the wheel. There were times when the catcher became a very substantial balance wheel. Those were when the pitching ace showed evidence that his nerves were shaky. A case where the catcher brought the pitcher back again to working order. The catcher is a target for a barrage of curves, fast balls and wild pitches. He is the only player who faces the rest of his team-mates. He is in a position to observe the opposing batter and baserunners. The team depend on him to steady the pitcher and tame the baserunners. To cut off a runner at third base, a catcher must make a throw of ninety feet, while to catch a runner at second ,he must throw one hundred and twenty-seven feet. In George Kondeff, the home team has a catcher who possesses every qualification, a good throwg arm, quick thinker with speed and stamina, and a lad who is clipping the horse-hide at 333. With either Sullivan who is batting for 267 or Petrocchi at 259, we find a winning battery hitting at a 300 clip.

Our home team infield "supreme," composed of Billy Kirby, Johnny Vasquez, Captain Tudo Carrasco and Pete Dinneen.

Pete Dinneen is a good first baseman. He does everything well. This lad fields so gracefully that difficult chances look easy. His great talent is receiving throws from the infield, rarely does a wild throw get away from him, and he is batting for 442.

Captain Carrasco ranks as one of the best second basemen of the semi-pro ranks. He can cover a tremendous amount of territory. The distance from first to second is ninety feet, and Carrasco is smart. He is an expert at guessing when the runner on first is going to steal. This boy is skillful at going back in "No Man's Land" for fly-balls, and knows how to co-operate with the shortstop. A great pivot in completing double plays and hitting the horse-hide for 348.

Johnny Vasquez at shortstop has skill in handling ground balls; accuracy in throwing to bases; ability to tag a runner; alertness in covering second in time of need; none better in backing up throws; and skill in going to the short outfield for tantalizing flies. This lad covers much territory and his strong accurate arm enables him to cut many runners at first by inches, thus saving a hit being made against our pitcher. Johnny has been pasting the old apple at a 377 clip.

Bill Kirby is one of the best fielding third basemen of the semi-pro ranks. He dashes in, fields a bunt, and throws to bases with unbelievable speed. He is both swift and accurate on the long, difficult throw across the diamond to first base. He rarely misses a foul fly ball along the third base foulline, and is clipping the pill for an average of 336.

Perfect understanding exists between the members of the infield. At second base, the shortstop and second baseman are never in doubt as to who is to cover the bag. At first and third, the pitcher always knows who is to field the bunt and who is to cover the sack. The shortstop and third baseman agree on who is to relay a throw from deep left, and similarly, the second and first basemen know who is to take the relay from deep right.

The success of this infield can be credited to their harmonious relations, one to the other. To their talk over plays that could occur, and what part they must play if they do occur. Their great spirit of understanding which cultivates teamwork.

The outfielders, Harry Maloney, Joe Albrecht, Snooks Nelder and Sammy Hawley, are second to none as a combination of fly hawks. These fielders do not stay rooted to one spot, for these boys range over considerable territory, so that they increase their chances of making a catch. When one, and only one error has been made by the outfield, one can realize the amount of territory this combination can cover. The batting averages for these fly hawks are: Maloney 439; Albrecht 286; Nelder 412 and Hawley 571.

Evenly balanced offensive as well as defensive strength; a team average for batting of 372, coupled with that great team spirit of all for one and one for all, instituted by a well liked and thought of manager, is what brought success to the Daly City Tanforan team.

Manager Martin has made application and has been assured of a place in the California Semi-Pro Baseball Tournament which opens on August 23 at Oakland.

Two former pitching aces of great promise are now in training to aid the Daly City Tanforans bring honor to our city. These lads are Pat Holmes and Gene Keagle. Catcher Krohn, formerly of the Toledo baseball club and Lefty Gamino, first baseman of the Redwood City Regal Amber nine have also been signed by Manager Martin.

The home town team will journey to San Anselmo next Sunday to meet that town team.

Flooded Carburetor

When the motor fires a few times and then dies, the trouble may be in the choking mechanism.

The carburetor may have been flooded by excessive choking. If gasoline is observed dripping from the carburetor, wait until it drains away and then try to start the motor again without using the choke.

ABOUT LIGHTER OILS

Advocates of lighter engine lubricants among automotive engineers concede that there may be a slight increase in consumption as a result of using the less viscous oil. The difference, they say, is more than compensated for by better lubrication and the improvement in gasoline economy which is to be expected.

A lot of engine power is used in shearing power plant lubricants. This power is derived from the gasoline consumed.

CARBON REMOVAL

Car owners often postpone carbon removal jobs longer than they should, it is said.

While the car may seem to perform fairly well without having carbon removed, carbon deposits on valve seats frequently cause leaky valves, loss of power, and damage to the seating edge of the valves.

COMPRESSION LOSS

When the engine is slow to start and fails to pull well on a grade, loss of compression is often the cause, especially if the breaker points, battery and carburetor are in good condition.

Further evidence that faulty rings are resulting in diminished compression is apparent when the crankcase oil thins out quickly.

MODERN SERMON ON MOUNT

Sermons on the Mount are still a much cherished custom in various Swiss Alpine districts and the lovely Gastern valley above Kandersteg in the Barnese Oberland is one of them. Here, every year, on the first Sunday in August, divine church service is held in the outdoors. The people meet on a pasture near Selden and the pastor of Kandergrund preaches the sermon.

The custom dates back to the earliest days in which the secluded valley was inhabited throughout the year. Before the ski was known winter was a period of rigid seclusion, and only late in spring did the pastor of the lower region find his way up to the highlands.

At each yearly service the number of the congregation and a brief summary of the events of the year are recorded in a huge Bible, which was presented to the inhabitants of the Gastern valley by the Bernese. The Bible is kept in the dwelling of the oldest inhabitant.

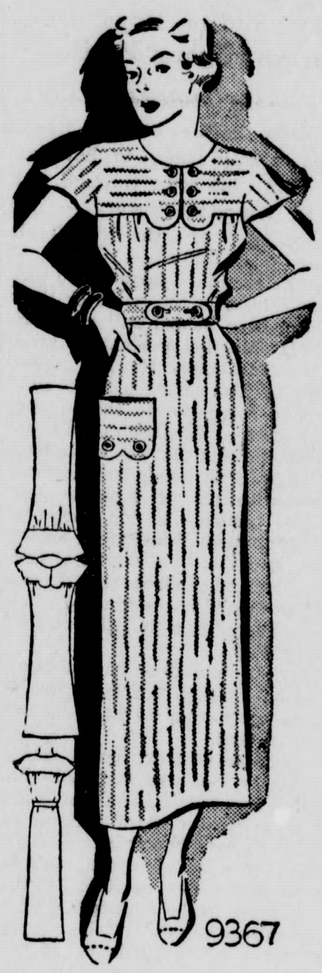
Settles Problem of "Working" Frock

PATTERN 9367



The morning after you start this, you'll be wearing it. It's that quick to make up, so don't waste any time making up your mind to have this for your next "work-a-day" frock! You can't possibly find a simpler pattern—nor more becoming lines—nor "breezier" sleeves. And those are the things that count for something in a kitchen. The nice scallops on the yoke and pocket are the details that so aptly make this frock "different," and the slit sleeve is ready for action. The bosom and back fullness (so much in vogue) does nicely by your femininity. Wear nice bright buttons to match the cotton print you choose.

Pattern 9367 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

CLUB FAVORS A DIRECT TAX

The Daly City Recreation and Improvement Club held a meeting Tuesday evening in the Daly City Hall. The meeting was well represented, and much enthusiasm was shown by every one.

The purpose of the meeting was to decide whether the people of Daly City should request the Daly City Council to call a bond election or a direct tax for the various projects which are such a necessity for our city.

It was voted unanimously to request the Daly City Council to call an election for the purpose of settling the question of whether the City Council should spend the sum not to exceed $35,000 from the general fund to carry out the program outlined by this organization.

If the Daly City Council should decide to carry out the request of the Daly City Recreation and Improvement Club the money could be raised by a direct tax in the coming year, without the necessity of issuing the bonds for a term of years, and the club holds, avoid a high amount of interest thereon.

The next meeting of the Daly City Rrecreation and Improvement Club will be held next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Daly City Hall. Every citizen is requested to attend these meetings.

GIRL RESERVES WIN BALL GAME

Victors In Close Contest At Camping Grounds At Big Basin

Daly City Girl Reserves troop played an interesting game of soft ball at the grounds near their Big Basin camp, known as Camp Lofaho, on Saturday of last week.

They tangled with the team from Camp Ayun Mapu, also at Big Basin, composed of members of a Girl Reserves troop from Los Angeles, which boasts of an enrollment of 70.

The Daly City Girl Reserves are vacationing at the famous resort and the membership numbers only 12. The girls are chaperoned by their advisors, Mrs. Cora Ray and Mrs. Helen Overstreet.

The girls from the south played good ball, but could not overcome the strong batting of our home town "babies," the game ending in a victory for "our side" by the score of 15 to 6.

The troop from Daly City raised all the money to pay expenses for this vacation through the efforts of its members, they having held several whist parties during the year for this purpose.

Daly City girls playing on the winning team were: Frances Wolf, catcher; Mildred Wolf, pitcher; Helen Overstreet, first base; Amae Kale, second base; Anita Kale, third base; Jean Armstrong, first short stop; Eleanore Armstrong, second short stop; Susiebelle Dorsey, first field; Lois Allen, second field; Margaret Ray, third field; Alice Johnson, substitute. Bob Hendrickson was umpire, while Ross Burghart was coach for the losing team. Helen Overstreet captained the winners.

Our girls were agreebly surprised by a visit, during the progress of the game, fom Daly City friends now vacationing at Santa Cruz, who also visited their camp after the game and again during the early part of this week.

The Daly City girls were so elated over their victory that they were easily persuaded by these friends to remain in camp another week, although the original plan had been to return home on Saturday of last week.

FESTIVAL HEADS TO THRESH OUT DEFINITE PLANS

San Mateo County is the second largest producer of artichokes in the United States, and that heather, chrysanthemums, tulips, and other bulbous flowers grown in San Mateo County are near the top in production figures from all over the country.

A nightly display of fireworks and band concerts will be features at the carnival.

Fred Carlisle of Burlingame, who has been active in theatrical direction in a number of productions, was chosen as director of the pageant.

TANFORAN GIVES RACING CLASS

An article of interest to all sportsmen appeared in the last issue of Harry Hammond's well-edited weekly, the Byron Times, as follows:

Vital aid will be extended the breeding of racehorses through the recent decision of J. W. Marchbank, directing owner of Tanforan and one of the leading horse experts of the United States, through the introduction of a special "Produce stake," named the Tanforan Futurity, in 1938.

This will provide something that Western tracks have sorely needed in recent years, and will put racing in the West on a par with East.

With the inauguraton of this new undertaking, brood mares that have foals in 1936 will be eligible for 1938 nominations.

The Tanforan Futurity will be at one mile, and will be open for nominations by breeders of the Nation — Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia and other states east of the Continental divide, as well as foals from Western farms.

Breeding, in the estimation of Marchbank, as well as other leading horsemen of the nation, is the build-up of racing on the firmest of foundations, and he has therefore set out to be the first in a movement to further that end of the game and give sufficient financial inducement to breeders to rear, nominate and start their best two-year-olds as the seasons roll around.
